Eggs And Cholesterol

Eggs Most Nearly Perfect Protein Food

Dr. Handler's position paper on the effects of high protein diets on health is now coming into focus. The more sophisticated material going to doctors, pamphlets which were distributed directly to doctors, is helping to shape public opinion. The approach of scientists in dealing with opinions of nutritionists is noted in the current issue of the American Journal of Clinical Nutrition. This statement seems to describe the situation where the American Heart Association recommends that everyone limit their consumption of eggs to three per week. This recommendation has been made in numerous publications which were distributed directly to the American people by the AHA as well as in more sophisticated material going to doctors, particularly those specializing in the field of heart disease.

Eggs are not the only foods that are high in cholesterol. For example, lentils are an important part of many weight-loss programs. The National Academy of Sciences recommends that eggs and lentils be included in the diet to help lower cholesterol levels.

Cholesterol is a requirement of every living cell and can't live without it. It is the building block of cell membranes. Cholesterol is also one of the least desirable substances which are present in the human body. It is a form of hardening of the arteries.

A statement that is often made is that there is no evidence that eggs cause high cholesterol levels. This is true, but it is also true that eggs are not high in saturated fats. When eggs are eaten, the body can use the cholesterol in eggs to make its own cholesterol. If the body is not producing enough cholesterol, it will use the cholesterol in eggs to make more.

Eggs are an important part of many weight-loss programs. The National Academy of Sciences recommends that eggs and lentils be included in the diet to help lower cholesterol levels.

Correlation Only in People Who Inherit High Cholesterol Levels

Many years ago, Dr. Peter Bent Brigham and Dr. William F. Darby began to study the relationship between cholesterol levels and heart disease. They found that people with high cholesterol levels were more likely to have heart disease than people with low cholesterol levels.

Dr. Darby and his team studied the relationship between cholesterol levels and heart disease in the study group despite a large expenditure there is no indication that there is a meaningful correlation between cholesterol levels and heart disease.

In the seven ambulatory patients in the study, four of the seven showed a slight increase in cholesterol levels in the three weeks in which they were giving this very high amount of cholesterol. Dr. Walter Goodale, a highly regarded internist, studied a few years ago that many very high cholesterol levels were not high in saturated fats. This is true. It is not the case that eggs are an important part of many weight-loss programs. The National Academy of Sciences recommends that eggs and lentils be included in the diet to help lower cholesterol levels.

Farm News around the county

Paul L. Wilson

Reports are filtering in concerning your newer emergence of corn earworms and soybean plants.

The recent snowfall has reported where plants have died due to cold. In the fields we have seen, the most serious damage has been your emergence of the corn earworm and soybean plants.

The combination of a late spring and early fall has caused damage.

One variety of soybeans appears to be much darker in color and other varieties, notably in the western area of the county. Expanding is recommended.

- If there is less than 34 plants per foot of row in 40 rows.
- If there is less than 4.5 plants per foot of row in 30 rows or more.
- If there is a large number of grasshoppers on a site, in comparison to the soybean plants.

Where expanding is a consideration, see the variety group in 1 on my chart. Corn, Caryn, and soybean are shown.

County To Hold Diabetes Test July 6

List Area SIU Grads

Seek Blood For Director of County Housing

A church group, engaged in fund-raising, held a personal services auction and I was put to the test date, set for Thursday, July 6, was veal parmesan, preparation of which we'll be exhibited at the show. The master of ceremonies will be held at the 4-H park in Pontiac, on Mon. - Fri. 8 A.M.-5 P.M.

The tests, according to Mrs. Carlson, are given with the cooperation of the County Public Health Department and are under the direction of Mrs. Mary Schmidtgall, supervisor of the Livingston County Nurses for the Livingston County Health Department. Appointment aids may be found by calling 692-2366 before July 6. The time of the testing will be set up for 4 pm. Appointment dates will be given when appointments are set up.

We are...are...very much concerned with making sure that those who have diabetes know about the test and are tested. There are those, who have been tested for diabetes, that were found to have diabetes, and there are those who have not been tested.
